OpenSourceSDN Project Application

Instructions: Thank you for considering OpenSourceSDN (OSSDN) as a place to host your project. We have a lightweight application process, more to make sure that you have the resources to support the project in its infancy (by "resources", we mean code authors, committers, and passionate contributors to get this project off the ground. OSSDN does not have a team of software developers to devote to your project, so we are looking for some sign of commitment on your part to sustain the project for the first 4-6 months until others join in. Most open source projects fail (let that sink in). The reason they fail is because the project has no commercial interest or application, or there is no committed cadre of people willing to devote their time to the success of the project. We're trying to help you think through this project before we host it, so that we can maximize your chances for success.

Thanks for considering these matters. Sincerely,

The OpenSourceSDN Leadership Team

About Your Project

Please describe your open source project. Let us know such things as the code base, the purpose/function of the software, and the contributor/committer team already assembled.

Why Should this Project be Hosted by OSSDN?

Has this software been hosted on any other open source software repository? If Yes, please explain, particularly if there are any upstream licensing matters that we should be aware of.

Thank you for your assistance. Please send your completed application to secretary@opensourcesdn.org
